

Welcome to The Beat

Welcome to the Johnny Mars Foundation

Welcome to the Dare to Dream One World Musical Journey

The beat is a twenty four page publication that is printed mainly in colour and will be distributed throughout schools nationally, starting with Somerset in September 2019. An A4 size magazine packed with information relating to The Anthem Project which encourages young people to engage and work together on creating music within their schools & colleges. As part of the learning and development programme associated with writing a school anthem, children and young people will be learning the harmonica to allow them to explore music and create their own musical tunes. The Johnny Mars Foundation is launching the project to develop the educational and therapeutic properties of music in Somerset, in the SW region and across the UK. Within the Dare to Dream One World Project, lessons will be encouraging the pupils of all ages to work together and build their confidence by allowing them to sing and perform music that they have learnt or composed themselves. The magazine will have fascinating features, topical articles and bite-sized news and information. The project will provide all young people with a voice to express themselves through music and song and the opportunity to embark upon their musical journey. Furthermore it will equip them with the tools to continue their musical development and provide them with their own magazine as tangible evidence of their journey.
